

ABSTRACT

A reconfigurable chip includes a despreader/correlator function block in order to better implement communication protocols which require despreading and/or correlation. These despreader/correlation functional blocks are used in addition to reconfigurable functional blocks having arithmetic logic units. The functions of the despreader/correlator functional blocks are preferably controlled by instructions from a local instruction memory.

09960710-091901
T06T50-0T/09660